Choosing Child Care in New York City
What Every Parent Needs to Know
And what the Law Requires

Before you enroll your child, visit the site one more time

Make sure:

- It is licensed, and the license is on the wall.
- You have reviewed the last inspection.
- It has window guards, soap and paper towels for washing, and refrigeration for foods.
- There are enough staff to care for the children.

Ask yourself:

- Will my child learn and be happy here?
- Am I comfortable leaving my child here?

For more information about child care

- Call 311 and ask for the Day-Care Borough Office that serves you.
- Visit nyc.gov/health. Click on Health Topics A-Z in the left column, then on Day Care. To find a child-care facility, go to Info for Parents, in the right column, and look for the type that interests you.
- To see if you qualify for subsidized day care, call 311 or visit nyc.gov/acs
- For more information about State-regulated day-care programs, visit www.ocfs.state.ny.us/main/becls
- For Child-Care Resources and Referral Agencies call 888-469-5999.

To report any site that you think is unsafe, unhealthy, or operating illegally, call 311 and ask for Day Care
A Safe and Nurturing Place to Learn

Good child care is more than babysitting. It encourages children to play and learn in a stimulating and nurturing environment. To keep children safe and healthy while they are in a provider’s care, the government licenses and regulates child-care facilities and inspects them regularly. This booklet guides parents through the agencies and laws that protect children in child care. It also helps them find the care that fits their families’ needs.

What the Law Requires

The site must be properly licensed and inspected

- The New York City Department of Health and Mental Hygiene (DOHMH) and the New York State Office of Children and Family Services (OCFCS) license and regulate most child-care settings. The DOHMH inspects and issues permits, licenses, and registrations for these sites in New York City.

- The provider must post a current license on the wall where you can see it.

- Review the last site inspection. Reports are available at nyc.gov/health or by calling 311.

See for yourself

Visit every site, especially the rooms your child will be in:
- Is the staff warm and friendly? Do they talk to children with affection and respect and listen to them with interest? Do they treat children well—never shouting, grabbing, or being mean?
- Do the children look happy?
- Are they supervised at all times, indoors and out?
- Are there plenty of toys and equipment (blocks, puzzles, books, clay, musical instruments) and activities to help children develop and learn?

Ask questions

- What languages are spoken?
- What are the hours? Are weekends available?
- Can you walk in any time? (The answer should be “yes!”)
- Do you need to bring diapers or other supplies?
- What are the fees? Lower-income families may be eligible for free or low-cost child care or an income tax credit (call 311 to see if you qualify).

Health regulations require that all sites:

- Have an approved health care plan to protect and promote the health of children.
- Be approved by the state to give medication to children. Otherwise, only over-the-counter ointments can be given.
- Get written consent from a parent (when the child first comes to the center) to get emergency medical care, if and when it is needed.
- Keep a first-aid kit accessible.
- Prohibit staff from smoking cigarettes or consuming alcohol or drugs during child-care hours.
